Motion To Dismiss of Defendant Oklahoma Office Of Administrative Hearings And Brief In Support

Defendant Oklahoma Office Of Administrative Hearings (hereinafter “OAH”) respectfully moves the Court to dismiss this action pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) and Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for the reasons stated in the following brief.

I. Statement Of The Case

This case is pure farce. It is the sine qua non of a frivolous lawsuit brought by a supremely vexatious frequent-flier litigant for no purpose other than to harass, harangue, annoy, oppress, and embarrass the defendants. One need look no further than the list of defendants to know everything that needs to be known about this lawsuit or its purveyor. Plaintiff has named 83 defendants with an eighty-fourth place holder defendant for “Doe” defendants numbering somewhere between 1 and 99. Most defendants have no specific allegations of fact or how they allegedly harmed Plaintiff pleaded against them in any way, shape, form, or fashion. In fact, Plaintiff’s amended complaint redefines the absurd. By way of one example, Plaintiff names several defendants in her lawsuit simply because they are married to elected officials:

72) Wendy Drummond a/k/a WENDY DRUMMOND, in her individual capacity and in official capacity as Spouse of OKLAHOMA ATTORNEY GENERAL;

74) Sarah Hazen Stitt a/k/a SARAH HAZEN STITT in her individual capacity and in official capacity as Spouse of GOVERNOR OF OKLAHOMA;

See Plaintiff's Amended Complaint [Doc. # 6] at p. 4.

It is clear that Plaintiff views litigation as a game where her goal is to file endless, baseless lawsuits against any person she imagines has done her wrong somehow stemming from child support and other orders entered against Plaintiff in the ongoing Child Support Case No. OAH 23-00313-73 ("OAH Case") and Tulsa County Oklahoma District Court Case Number FD-2015-2228 ("Tulsa County Case").<sup>1</sup> More pointedly, this case traces its lineage to lawful child support orders, consistent with Plaintiff's moral and legal duty to support her child, entered in Plaintiff's OAH Case and filed into the Tulsa County Case as per Oklahoma law.<sup>2</sup> Plaintiff didn't get her way in court so Plaintiff petulantly files lawsuit after lawsuit. However, they all suffer from fatal and sever infirmities just like the present one.

II. Argument and Authorities

A. Motion to Dismiss Standard for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction

A motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1) is in the form of "a facial attack." Holt v. U.S., 46 F.3d 1000, 1002 (10th Cir. 1995). A "facial attack on the complaint's allegations as to subject matter jurisdiction questions the sufficiency of the complaint." Id. (citing Ohio Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. U.S., 922 F.2d 320, 325 (6th Cir. 1990)). If a court determines it has been deprived of subject matter jurisdiction, then such court must dismiss the complaint pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1). Defendants contend that this Court is without jurisdiction over Plaintiff's suit because it was brought in derogation of the Eleventh Amendment and the sovereign immunity of the State of Oklahoma. Accordingly, the claims should be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1).

B. Standard for Dismissal for Failure to State a Claim

Defendant also contends Plaintiff has failed to state a claim for relief. “To survive a motion to dismiss [for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)], a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to ‘state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). “A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Id. (citing Twombly at 556). Under this standard, the Tenth Circuit has stated that “the mere metaphysical possibility that some plaintiff could prove some set of facts in support of the pleaded claims is insufficient; the complaint must give the court reason to believe that this plaintiff has a reasonable likelihood of mustering factual support for these claims.” Ridge at Red Hawk, L.L.C. v. Schneider, 493 F.3d 1174, 1177 (10th Cir. 2007) (emphasis in the original). In other words, a plaintiff must nudge his “claims across the line from conceivable to plausible[.]” Twombly at 570. Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief is a “context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense.” Iqbal at 679.

The Tenth Circuit in Robbins v. Oklahoma, 519 F.3d 1242, 1247-48 (10th Cir. 2008), explained that “plausibility” refers to the scope of the allegations in the complaint; “if they are so general that they encompass a wide swath of conduct, much of it innocent” or if the allegations are no more than “labels and conclusions” or a mere “formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action” then such allegations are not sufficient to place defendants on notice “of the actual grounds of the claim” against them. When this standard is applied to the factual allegations of the Amended Complaint, it is clear that this action should be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6).

C. Plaintiff’s Complaint is Subject to Dismissal Under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(1) Due to Eleventh Amendment Sovereign Immunity

The Oklahoma Department of Human Services (“DHS”) (formerly known as the Department of Public Welfare and the Department of Institutions, Social and Rehabilitative Services) was created in 1936 by §2 of Article XXV of the Oklahoma Constitution for the purpose of “administering and carrying into execution” all laws enacted by the Oklahoma Legislature pursuant to §1 of Article XXV. See 56 O.S. §§162.1(a) and 162.1a. Section 2 also requires DHS to “perform such other duties as may from time to time be prescribed by law.” See generally City of Sand Springs v. Department of Public Welfare, 608 P.2d 1139 (Okla. 1980). Within this legal framework is the establishment and maintenance of the OAH which conducts administrative child support hearings (such as Plaintiff’s OAH case) with the help of Administrative Law Judges. As an agency of the State of Oklahoma, DHS is unquestionably an arm of the State of Oklahoma. See, for example, Pennhurst State School & Hospital v. Halderman, 465 U.S. 89, 100 (1990); Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services v. Florida Nursing Home Association, 450 U.S. 147, 150 (1981) (per curiam); Alabama v. Pugh, 438 U.S. 781 (1978) (per curiam).

The foregoing in mind, the Eleventh Amendment provides:

[t]he Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.

U.S. Const. amend. XI.

Towards this end,

[t]he Supreme Court has interpreted the Eleventh Amendment to mean “States may not be sued in federal court unless they consent to it in unequivocal terms or unless Congress, pursuant to a valid exercise of power, unequivocally expresses its intent to abrogate the immunity.” Green v. Mansour, 474 U.S. 64, 68, 106 S.Ct. 423, 88 L.Ed.2d 371 (1985). This prohibition encompasses suits against state agencies. See Puerto Rico Aqueduct and Sewer Auth. v. Metcalf & Eddy, Inc., 506 U.S. 139, 144, 113 S.Ct. 684, 121 L.Ed.2d 605 (1993).

Muscogee (Creek) Nation v. Oklahoma Tax Comm’n, 611 F.3d 1222, 1227 (10th Cir. 2010).

Because States may not be sued in federal court absent their consent or specific and unequivocal Congressional mandate, [t]he Eleventh Amendment is a jurisdictional bar that precludes unconsented suits in federal court against a state and arms of the state. See Steadfast Ins. Co. v. Agric. Ins. Co., 507 F.3d 1250, 1252–53 (10th Cir.2007).

Wagoner Cty. Rural Water Dist. No. 2 v. Grand River Dam Auth., 577 F.3d 1255, 1258 (10th Cir. 2009).

As for the possibility that OKDHS/CSS has unequivocally consented to suit herein by waiving its Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity, [t]he Court will give effect to a State's waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity “‘only where stated by the most express language or by such overwhelming implication from the text as [will] leave no room for any other reasonable construction.’ ” *306 Atascadero State Hospital, supra, 473 U.S., at 239–240, 105 S.Ct., at 3145–3146 (quoting Edelman v. Jordan, 415 U.S. 651, 673, 94 S.Ct. 1347, 1360, 39 L.Ed.2d 662 (1974) (internal quotation omitted)). A State does not waive its Eleventh Amendment immunity by consenting to suit only in its own courts, see, e.g., Florida Dept. of Health and Rehabilitative Services v. Florida Nursing Home Assn., 450 U.S. 147, 150, 101 S.Ct. 1032, 1034, 67 L.Ed.2d 132 (1981) (per curiam), and “[t]hus, in order for a state statute or constitutional provision to constitute a waiver of Eleventh Amendment immunity, it must specify the State's intention to subject itself to suit in federal court.” Atascadero State Hospital, supra, 473 U.S., at 241, 105 S.Ct., at 3146.

Port Auth. Trans-Hudson Corp. v. Feeney, 495 U.S. 299, 305–06, 110 S. Ct. 1868, 1873, 109 L. Ed. 2d 264 (1990).

In this vein, it is clear that the State of Oklahoma and its agencies – including DHS – have not waived their Eleventh Amendment immunity and consented to actions in federal court such as this case. See 51 O.S. §152.1(B) (which expressly preserves the State of Oklahoma's Eleventh Amendment immunity). Likewise, Oklahoma's Eleventh Amendment immunity has not been negated by any unequivocal Congressional mandate subjecting DHS to suit herein for alleged civil rights violations,

[i]t is well settled that neither 42 U.S.C. § 1981 nor § 1983 abrogate the Eleventh Amendment immunity of the states. E.g., Will v. Mich. Dep't of State Police, 491 U.S. 58, 66–67, 109 S.Ct. 2304, 105 L.Ed.2d 45 (1989) (§ 1983); Ellis v. Univ. of Kan. Med. Ctr., 163 F.3d 1186, 1196 (10th Cir.1998) (§§ 1981, 1983, and 1985). Thus, Congress has not abrogated the defendants' Eleventh Amendment immunity under these provisions.

LaFavre v. Kansas ex rel. Stovall, 6 Fed. Appx. 799, 805 (10th Cir. 2001).

As such, Plaintiff's claims against OAH are jurisdictionally<sup>3</sup> barred pursuant to the plain language of the Eleventh Amendment and must be dismissed.

D. The Rooker-Feldman Doctrine Warrants Dismissal

It is beyond dispute that Plaintiff's claims arise from state court judgments<sup>4</sup> for child support. Resultantly, they are barred herein according to the Rooker-Feldman doctrine which holds that the federal courts (other than the United States Supreme Court) lack jurisdiction to adjudicate claims seeking review of state court judgments. Feldman, 460 U.S. at 483-484. See Kiowa Indian Tribe of Oklahoma v. Hoover, 150 F.3d 1163, 1169 (10th Cir. 1998) (holding that "federal review of state court judgments can be obtained only in the United States Supreme Court" under 28 U.S.C. §1257). Apt here is the following from the Tenth Circuit:

[t]he Supreme Court has explained that Rooker-Feldman "is confined to cases . . . brought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court

<sup>3</sup> "Because the State's assertion of Eleventh Amendment immunity challenges the subject matter jurisdiction of the district court, the issue must be resolved before a court may address the merits of [the] underlying . . . claim." Martin v. Kansas, 190 F.3d 1120, 1126 (10th Cir. 1999), overruled on other grounds by Bd. of Trustees of Univ. of Ala. v. Garrett, 531 U.S. 356, 148 L. Ed. 2d 866, 121 S. Ct. 955 (2001)."

Joseph A. v. Ingram, 275 F.3d 1253, 1259 (10th Cir. 2002)

<sup>4</sup> Both the actual child support order as well as past due child support that become judgments automatically by operation of law. See, inter alia, 43 O.S. § 137.

judgments rendered before the district court proceedings commenced and inviting district court review and rejection of those judgments." Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Saudi Basic Indus. Corp., 544 U.S. 280, 284, 125 S. Ct. 1517, 161 L. Ed. 2d 454 (2005). "In other words, an element of the claim must be that the state court wrongfully entered its judgment." Campbell, 682 F.3d at 1283. Tso's Complaint seeks relief from alleged harms flowing from "acts of the state court." Campbell, 682 F.3d at 1285. That is, "the allegedly wrongful act that caused damage was the state-court order itself," and his claims "required a determination of the bona fides of the prior state-court judgment," id. at 1284. Though he complains of various acts taken by the defendants, whether through a RICO "conspiracy" or denial of just compensation, the only harms alleged involved deprivations that resulted from the state courts' orders. His claims are therefore barred by Rooker-Feldman.

Plaintiff's complaints are born of state court orders and his requested relief would require this court to impermissibly determine the "bona fides" of the orders. Ibid.

Further, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine bars consideration not only of issues actually presented to and decided by a state court, but also bars consideration of constitutional claims that are "'inextricably intertwined' with" issues ruled upon by a state court. See id. (quoting Feldman, 460 U.S. at 483-84, n.16). "A claim is inextricably intertwined if the federal claim succeeds only to the extent that the state court wrongly decided the issues before it." Charchenko v. City of Stillwater, 47 F.3d 981, 983 (8th Cir. 1995). "In other words, Rooker-Feldman precludes a federal action if the relief requested in the federal action would effectively reverse the state court decision or void its ruling." Id. In this case it is inescapable that the events giving rise to Plaintiff's allegations arise from and are inextricably intertwined with a current state court case involving child support and/or would involve this court reviewing the decisions of a state court. Likewise, to the extent that Plaintiff seeks a declaratory judgment regarding child support, such would be barred by Rooker-Feldman as well:

Feldman not only prohibited direct review of state judgments by lower federal courts, but it also prohibited those federal courts from issuing any declaratory relief that is “inextricably intertwined” with the state court judgment. Feldman, 460 U.S. at 483–84 n. 16, 103 S.Ct. at 1315–16 n. 16; Razatos, 746 F.2d at 1433.

Facio v. Jones, 929 F.2d 541, 543 (10th Cir. 1991).

E. Younger Abstention

It appears Plaintiff also seeks prospective relief regarding the continuing child support orders of the Tulsa County Case/CSS Case. While such relief may avoid the jurisdictional bar of the Eleventh Amendment, it cannot avoid non-discretionary application of Younger abstention herein:

[i]n determining whether Younger abstention is appropriate, a court considers whether: "(1) there is an ongoing state criminal, civil, or administrative proceeding, (2) the state court provides an adequate forum to hear the claims raised in the federal complaint, and (3) the state proceedings involve important state interests, matters which traditionally look to state law for their resolution or implicate separately articulated state policies." Amanatullah v. Colorado Bd. of Med. Exam'rs, 187 F.3d 1160, 1163 (10th Cir. 1999) (internal quotations omitted). Once these three conditions are met, Younger abstention is non-discretionary and, absent extraordinary circumstances, a district court is required to abstain. See Seneca-Cayuga Tribe v. Oklahoma, 874 F.2d 709, 711 (10th Cir. 1989).

Crown Point I Ltd. Liab. Co. v. Intermountain Rural Elec. Ass'n, 319 F.3d 1211, 1215 (10th Cir. 2003).

In this case, there can be no doubt of the wholesale application of Younger abstention. First, it is beyond dispute that there is an ongoing child support case in Oklahoma state court which continues until the minor child reaches majority. See, for example, 43 O.S. § 112(E). Second, the care and support of Oklahoma’s children by their parents is ineluctably one that involves important state interests. See, for example, Moore v. Sims, 442 U.S. 415, 435, 99 S. Ct. 2371, 60 L. Ed. 2d 994 (1979) (family relations are traditional area of state concern); Morrow v. Winslow, 94 F.3d 1386, 1397 (10th Cir. 1996) (state has interest in orderly conduct of proceedings in its courts in manner which protects interest of child and family), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1143, 117 S. Ct. 1311, 137 L. Ed. 2d 475 (1997). Third, Oklahoma state courts have jurisdiction to entertain and decide §1983 suits. See Howlett v. Rose, 496 U.S. 356, 367, 110 S. Ct. 2430, 2438 (1990). And this truism rings loudly with regard to matters of state concern:

[t]he seriousness of federal judicial interference with state civil functions has long been recognized by this Court. We have consistently required that when federal courts are confronted with requests for such relief, they should abide by standards of restraint that go well beyond those of private equity jurisprudence. For example, Massachusetts State Grange v. Benton, 272 U.S. 525 (1926), involved an effort to enjoin the operation of a state daylight savings act. Writing for the Court, Mr. Justice Holmes cited Fenner v. Boykin, supra, and emphasized a rule that "should be very strictly observed," 272 U.S., at 529, "that no injunction ought to issue against officers of a State clothed with authority to enforce the law in question, unless in a case reasonably free from doubt and when necessary to prevent great and irreparable injury." Id., at 527.

Although Mr. Justice Holmes was confronted with a bill seeking an injunction against state executive officers, rather than against state judicial proceedings, [*604] we think that the relevant considerations of federalism are of no less weight in the latter setting. If anything, they counsel more heavily toward federal restraint, since interference with a state judicial proceeding prevents the state not only from effectuating its substantive policies, but also from continuing to perform the separate function of providing a forum competent to vindicate any constitutional objections interposed against those policies. Such interference also results in duplicative legal proceedings, and can readily be interpreted "as reflecting negatively upon the state court's ability to enforce constitutional principles."

Moreover, Plaintiff has made no showing that Oklahoma state courts are somehow insufficient for her claims – save the fact that she dislikes their rulings. However, that is not the standard:

Plaintiff argues that the Washington state court did not provide an adequate forum because it overruled his argument on timeliness grounds. See Plaintiff's Response (Doc. # 52) at 5. Plaintiff, however, has not shown that he did not have the opportunity to present his claim in state court at an earlier date. See Juidice v. Vail, 430 U.S. 327, 337, 97 S. Ct. 1211, 51 L. Ed. 2d 376 (1977) (Younger only requires that plaintiff be afforded opportunity to present federal claim in state proceedings; failure to avail himself of opportunity [*1216] does not mean state procedures were inadequate); World Famous Drinking Emporium, Inc. v. City of Tempe, 820 F.2d 1079, 1083 (9th Cir. 1987) (fact that plaintiff did not avail itself of opportunity to litigate constitutional claim in state forum does not demonstrate that state forum was inadequate); see also Spargo, 351 F.3d at 79 (relevant question is whether state procedural remedies could provide relief sought, not whether they will provide remedy); Kirschner v. Klemons, 225 F.3d 227, 235 (2d Cir. 2000) (to establish inadequacy of state forum, plaintiff must show that state laws, procedures or practices prevent his effective interposition of federal contentions). Plaintiff has not satisfied his burden to show that state procedures did not afford him an adequate remedy. See Pennzoil, 481 U.S. at 15.

Phillips v. Martin, 535 F. Supp. 2d 1210, 1215-16 (D. Kan. 2008).

In this case the three Younger conditions are clearly met and this Court should abstain from exercising jurisdiction herein and dismiss this matter.

F. Plaintiff's Complaint Fails To State A Claim Upon Which Any Relief Can Be Granted Against OAH/DHS Under 42 U.S.C. §§ 1983, 1985

Plaintiff cannot recover against DHS on her 1983 or 1985 claims because OAH/DHS is not a person subject to suit thereunder. In this regard, § 1983<sup>5</sup> provides in pertinent part as follows:

[e]very person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress.

Ibid (Emphasis added).

In Will v. Michigan Department of State Police, 491 U.S. 58 (1989), the United States Supreme Court considered the issue of whether a State is a “person” under § 1983. After examining the express language, congressional purpose and legislative history of the statute, the Supreme Court concluded that States or other governmental entities that are considered “arms of the State” for Eleventh Amendment purposes are not “persons” under § 1983. Id. at 68-71. See also Howlett v. Rose, 496 U.S. 356, 365 (1990) (holding that “Will establishes that the State and arms of the State, which have traditionally enjoyed Eleventh Amendment immunity, are not subject to suit under §1983

<sup>5</sup> Likewise, §1985 applies to “two or more persons.” Ibid. Therefore, §1985 is inapplicable to DHS. See, inter alia, Will v. Michigan Department of State Police, 491 U.S. 58 (1989).

in either federal court or state court.”) (emphasis added); Harris v. Champion, 51 F.3d 901, 905-06 (10th Cir. 1995). OAH/DHS is clearly an “arm” of the State of Oklahoma. See McKinney v. State of Okl., Dep’t of Human Servs., 925 F.2d 363, 365 (10th Cir. 1991)(holding that the Eleventh Amendment bars actions against DHS under § 1983 in federal court).

G. Plaintiff Has Failed To State A Claim

Plaintiff’s Amended Complaint is nothing more than a cri de coeur comprised of conclusory statements and absurd allegations which fall woefully short of plausibility. Because of this, Plaintiff has “not nudged [her] claims across the line from conceivable to plausible[.]” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 547. Accordingly, Plaintiff’s claims must be dismissed for failure to state a claim.

H. Plaintiff’s Lawsuit Is Untimely

“A hodgepodge of state and federal law governs the timeliness of claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983.” Mondragon v. Thompson, 519 F.3d 1078, 1082 (10th Cir. 2008). Federal law determines the date on which the claim accrues, but the limitations period is drawn from the “personal-injury statute of the state in which the federal district court sits.” Id. Under federal law, “claims accrue and the statute of limitations begins to run when the plaintiff knows or has reason to know of the existence and cause of the injury which is the basis of his action.” Alexander v. Oklahoma, 382 F.3d 1206, 1215 (10th Cir. 2004). Oklahoma has a two-year statute of limitations for personal-injury suits. 12 Okla. Stat. §95(A)(3).

Plaintiff also fails to allege in her Amended Complaint her compliance with the Oklahoma Governmental Tort Claims Act (“GTCA”) which is fatal to Plaintiff’s suit. All tort actions and claims against the State of Oklahoma and its agencies (including DHS), and employees arising after October 1, 1985, are governed by the provisions of the Oklahoma Governmental Tort Claims Act (“GTCA”), 51 O.S. §151, et seq. See 51 O.S. §171. By enacting the GTCA, the Oklahoma Legislature adopted and expanded the common law doctrine of sovereign immunity doctrine to include all torts of State employees regardless of whether the employees are engaged in “governmental or proprietary functions” as long as the employees were within the scope of their employment with the State. See 51 O.S. §152.1(A) and §153(A). However, 51 O.S. §152.1(B) effectuated an express partial waiver of the State’s sovereign immunity “only to the extent and in the manner provided” by the GTCA. (Emphasis added). Thus, the liability of the State and its agencies under the GTCA is “subject to the limitations and exceptions specified in this act” and “shall be exclusive and shall constitute the extent of tort liability of the state . . . arising from common law, statute, the Oklahoma Constitution, or otherwise.” 51 O.S. §153(A) and §153(B) (emphasis added).

To successfully bring a tort claim against DHS, an individual must comply with the notice and commencement provisions of the GTCA. See 51 O.S. §§ 153 and 156; Barrios v. Haskell Cty. Pub. Facilities Auth., 2018 OK 90, 432 P.3d 233; Gurley v. Memorial Hospital of Guymon, 1989 OK 34, 770 P.2d 573, 576 (noting that the GTCA “narrowly structures the method for bringing a tort claim against a political subdivision.”). Notice is a central component of the GTCA. See 51 O.S. § 157(B) (“No action for any cause arising under this act . . . shall be maintained unless valid notice has been given[.]”);

Compliance with the statutory notice provisions of the GTCA is a jurisdictional requirement to be completed prior to the filing of any pleadings. The record before us does not show that Hall has complied with the notice provisions of the GTCA, nor does he allege that he has complied. In addition to the applicability of § 566.4, 57 O.S.2011 § 566.5 provides that complete exhaustion of statutory remedies against private correctional facilities is jurisdictional. Based on the record provided, and the plain and unambiguous requirements of 57 O.S.2011 § 566.4 and § 566.5, the district court had no jurisdiction over the tort claims asserted in Hall's lawsuit and properly granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment.

Further, “[c]ompliance with notice of claim provisions has been interpreted to be either a condition precedent to suit against a political subdivision, or a jurisdictional prerequisite to judicial intervention.” Gurley, 770 P.2d at 576. Additionally, the GTCA requires any person having a claim against the state to submit a claim in writing within one (1) year of the date of loss or the claim is “forever barred.” 51 O.S. § 156 (emphasis added).

The foregoing in mind, Plaintiff’s lawsuit concerns occurring well beyond any applicable statute of limitations and must result in dismissal with prejudice. Additionally, Plaintiff’s failure to adhere to the mandatory strictures of the GTCA and her failure (and inability) to plead compliance with the GTCA also creates a jurisdictional bar to her claims.

I. Plaintiff Wholly Failed To Comply With Rule 8

Pursuant to Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff must “state their claims intelligibly so as to inform the defendants of the legal claims being asserted.” Mann v. Boatright, 477 F.3d 1140, 1148 (10th Cir. 2007). Specifically, Rule 8(a) instructs the plaintiff to plead for relief in a “short and plain statement,” while Rule 8(d)(1) adds that each allegation in the complaint must be “simple, concise, and direct.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) and (d). Accordingly, something “written more as a press release, prolix in evidentiary detail, yet without simplicity, conciseness and clarity as to whom plaintiffs are suing for what wrongs” would violate Rule 8. See Mann, 477 F.3d at 1148.

Admittedly, perfection is not required of a pro se party and it is understood that pro se litigants are held to a less stringent standard as to the form and, in some respects, content of a pleading. However, although the drafting standard may be less stringent, the requirement that pro se plaintiffs must still adhere to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is not. Garrett v. Selby Connor Maddux & Janer, 425 F.3d 836, 840, 62 Fed. R. Serv. 3d 1019, (10th Cir. 2005); Nielsen

v. Price, 17 F.3d 1276, 1277 (10th Cir.1994) (citing several cases for principle that pro se parties must comply with same procedural rules that govern all other litigants). Ogden v. San Juan Cnty., 32 F.3d 452, 455 1994 WL 401467 (10th Cir. 1994). In this regard, when a plaintiff violates Rule 8, a district court is authorized to dismiss the case, in its entirety, based upon this violation alone. Mann v. Boatright, 477 F.3d 1140, 1138-49 (10th Cir. 2007). In fact, it is not the court's job to cobble together potential claims strewn about in an overly lengthy complaint and dismissal of any such complaint is appropriate. Id

Finally, a Rule 8 violation is different from a failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6). Even if a complaint sufficiently alleges enough facts to survive a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a Court may still invoke Rule 8 to strike the complaint if the necessary facts are "scattered throughout the complaint" or completely absent. See Mann, 477 F.3d at 1147; see also Ciralsky v. C.I.A., 355 F.3d 661, 671 (D.C. Cir. 2004) (holding that there was a Rule 8 violation even though plaintiff had pled more details than necessary to survive dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6)).

In the case at bar, the Amended Complaint fails to contain a simple, concise, short and plain statement as to the alleged harm and the relevant facts that give rise to the alleged harm. Instead, it's a diatribe and opinion piece masquerading as a lawsuit. Moreover, Plaintiff repeatedly ascribes the various references and claims generically to all Defendants grouped together in one category. Again, this makes it difficult, if not impossible, to identify which claim is directed towards which specific Defendant or when such claim is alleged to have occurred. Pleading in this fashion creates an unjustified burden on the defendants who are required to sift through all of these pages in an attempt to identify allegations to which they are required to respond.

For these reasons, it is indisputable that the Amended Complaint fails at the most fundamental level and runs afoul of Rule 8. Thus, this case should be summarily dismissed in its entirety.

III. Conclusion

As clearly shown above, Plaintiff's claims against DHS must be dismissed. And the infirmities plaguing Plaintiff's Amended Complaint cannot be cured by amendment and should result in dismissal with prejudice.
